

Athena's Little Owl

The sunlit hills of Greece roll down to a bright blue sea, dotted with olive groves, white marble columns, and little towns where everyone knows your name. High above, hidden in the clouds of Mount Olympus, the gods watch over the world, and the hills are full of wonders: riddling sphinxes, kindly centaurs, shy satyrs, and nymphs who sing by the springs. Here a hero is not the strongest or the loudest, but the one who keeps a cool head, asks good questions, and stands by a friend. The grandest deeds are done by being brave and kind and full of ideas. Even a fearsome guardian, met with courage and a fair word, often turns out to be lonelier than it is wicked.

The answers are here. This part is for the grown-up, not for the child.

Show the matching picture in the Atlas as you reach each place.

Read aloud, slowly and warmly. Stop often to let the children answer. There are no wrong answers here, only kind new ideas to try.

Before you begin

One grey, misty morning a tiny owl came tumbling out of the fog and landed, all ruffled, in the middle of the Olive Town. Her name is Glaux, and she belongs to kind Athena, high on the hill of white marble. But the fog is thick, and poor Glaux cannot find her way home.

Old Daphne, who keeps the olive grove, calls you to her. "You two have sharp eyes and kind hearts," she says. "Will you help little Glaux find her way back up to Athena?"

She tucks a soft scarf around the owl and smiles. "Up here we do not help by being the biggest or the fastest. We help by being brave, kind, and full of ideas."

What is your hero name? Are you a hero of Imagination, of Courage, or of Heart?

Stop 1 The Foggy Square

Glaux sits in the middle of the square, very small and very scared. Her feathers are puffed up. Her big round eyes blink fast. When you step too quickly, she hops away.

How could you help her feel safe? Could you move slowly and speak softly? Could you hold out a steady hand for her to perch on? What do you try?

When you are calm and gentle, Glaux stops trembling. She hops onto your hand and gives a happy little hoot. Now she trusts you.

Stop 2 The Whispering Paths

At the edge of town, three little paths climb up into the mist. They all look the same. Only one leads to Athena's temple.

A goat-legged satyr peeks over a wall. It is Bramble, who loves a traveller and a good joke. He hums and tips his head, ready to help if you ask nicely.

How will you choose the right path? Look closely. Glaux dropped soft grey feathers as she fell. Could you follow them back up? Could you ask Bramble for a hint?

When you follow the trail of feathers, or ask kind Bramble, you find the right path and climb up through the mist together.

Stop 3 The High Perch

At the top stands a little marble temple. High up is Glaux's cosy perch, but she is tired and the last of the fog still hides it. She is afraid to fly up alone.

This is not about being strong. How could you help her up? Could you lift a steady branch like a bridge? Could you cheer her on so she feels brave? What do you do?

When you help her with kindness, Glaux flutters up to her perch and snuggles down, safe and warm at last.

Glaux Comes Home

As the little owl settles, two calm grey eyes open in the temple. It is Athena, goddess of good ideas, and she is smiling at you.

The morning fog melts away. Sunlight pours over the Olive Town below, warm and golden. Glaux hoots a thank-you from her perch.

You did it together. You were brave, you were full of ideas, and most of all, you were kind. Well done, heroes.

Athena's Little Owl: Rules for the Grown-Up

New to this? Read the Guide for the Grown-Up first. It explains the whole idea in two pages and you will never need it again.

The Guide for the Grown-Up explains how the game works: this page holds only what is special about this story. It is a gentle, kindly tale, and no one in it is ever truly hurt or frightened for long. A failed roll is never a defeat; nobody loses.

Setting up

- Print the map. Each player puts a small figure on the Start, the Olive Town.
- This world has no magic. Instead each hero leans on one of three qualities: Imagination (dreaming up ideas), Courage (a steady heart), or Heart (caring for others). On the hero sheet, where it says magic, let each child write the quality they like best. Two different qualities work best together.
- Give each player five energy stars (five small tokens or bricks). They are spent and refilled during play.
- Set out a prop or two if you can: anything small and soft to stand in for Glaux the owl, and a feather or a scrap of paper or two for her trail. Anything can be anything.
- Keep your dice and the dice-band table from the back of the kit beside you.

The Twist of Fate

Once at each place the players may roll for a twist; read the matching line. The Guide explains how it works.

Roll	Twist of Fate
1	A friendly satyr gives you one free hint.
2	You find your courage again, and take back one energy star.
3	A favourable wind, and the next challenge is Easy.
4	Chiron the centaur passes by and nods kindly. All is well.
5	An olive branch for luck: keep one roll to use again later.
6	A burst of birdsong, and for a moment everyone feels brave.

How it ends

There is no foe in this tale at all, only a small lost owl and the kindness it takes to bring her home. The adventure is won by helping Glaux feel safe, choosing the true path with sharp eyes, and giving the tired little owl a gentle hand up to her perch. Let the children lead with care; that is the whole point. See the puzzles page for the three challenges and their solutions.

Athena's Little Owl: Puzzles and Solutions

For your eyes, not the children's. Each stop lists its band, what the players need to work out, the intended solution, and a gentle fallback so a stuck child always moves forward. More than one good idea should work; reward fresh ideas and kindness over the "right" answer.

Stop 1: The Foggy Square (Easy)

The challenge. Glaux the owl is too frightened to be carried. The players must help her feel safe enough to trust them and hop onto a waiting hand.

Intended solution. This is a Heart and Observation moment. The kind move is to slow right down: lower their voices, move gently, hold still, and let the owl come to them rather than grabbing for her. Holding out a steady hand and waiting works beautifully.

Fallback. If the children rush and Glaux hops away, have Daphne hum a soft tune, or let a player spend an energy star to sit quietly until the owl creeps closer. Any gentle idea wins her trust and tops up an energy star.

Make it simpler. Ask the littlest one to whisper "hello, little owl" and hold out one open hand, and let Glaux hop straight on.

Stop 2: The Whispering Paths (Normal)

The challenge. Three paths climb into the fog and all look the same. The players must find the one that leads to Athena's temple.

Intended solution. This is an Observation and Logic moment. The good idea is to look down and follow the trail of soft grey feathers Glaux shed as she fell. Asking Bramble the Satyr for a hint, or letting the owl herself turn her head toward home, works just as well.

Fallback. If the children are unsure, have Bramble pop up and point the way with a joke, or let them spend an energy star to spot the feathers in the mist. Getting through with help still counts as a full success and tops up an energy star.

Make it simpler. Lay out a little line of feathers (or torn paper scraps) and let the child simply follow them with a finger to the right path.

Stop 3: The High Perch (Normal)

The challenge. Glaux is tired and afraid to fly the last stretch up to her high marble perch through the mist. The players must help her up.

Intended solution. This is a Heart and Spatial moment. Any kind, gentle idea works: lifting a steady branch to bridge the gap, making a careful step for her small feet, or simply cheering her on until she finds the courage to flutter up. There is no wrong way to be kind here.

Fallback. If the children freeze, have Glaux give a small, hopeful hoot and lean toward them, and let a single encouraging word be enough. The moment they offer help of any kind, the little owl reaches her perch.

Make it simpler. Let the child lift Glaux gently in two cupped hands and place her on her perch, cheering "up you go" as they do.

The ending

There is no battle and no loser. When Glaux is safely home, kind Athena opens her calm grey eyes, the morning fog lifts, and the sun pours warm and golden over the Olive Town. The heroes have won the only way anyone wins here, by being brave, kind, and full of ideas.
