

In the enchanted springs of Portugal, cobblestone towns sit among terracotta roofs, almond trees that blossom white as snow, and hills crowned with stars. Water is the magic here: every spring, fountain, and old stone well has its own quiet wonder. Enchanted maidens called the Mouras keep the springs sweet, a bright rooster crows only the truth, and a playful little goblin called the Trasgo tidies and teases when no one is looking. Here a hero wins not by being the strongest, but by being kind, asking the water gently, and never giving up on a friend. Even a big, fearsome-looking giant of the hills usually turns out to be lonelier than it is frightening.

Picture 1

The bright rooster of Barcelos on his perch with his beak shut, looking sad, as two children gently comfort him.

Picture 2

A lively pottery market with an empty cushion where something shiny used to sit, children studying the cobbles for clues.

The open top of an old bell tower, a small jackdaw beside a glittering nest holding a silver cup, children waving gently.

Picture 4

The children handing the bright silver cup back to the relieved market folk, the traveller smiling as the crowd turns kind.

Picture 5

The rooster of Barcelos crowing at last on a sunlit wall as the sun rises gold over the rooftops and the square cheers.
