

The Lost Little Aurora

The snowlit fjords of the north run deep and blue between white mountains and dark green pines, dotted with cosy longhouses whose windows glow warm amber against the snow. Above them arches the Great World Tree, and on clear nights the sky dances with the colours of the aurora. The fjords are full of gentle wonders: a chattering squirrel who carries messages along the tree, two wise ravens, light spirits who dance in the dark, and frost giants who look fearsome but are mostly just cold and lonely. Here a hero is not the strongest or the loudest, but the one who keeps a warm heart, thinks things through, and shares the fire. The grandest deeds are done by being clever and brave and kind, and even a giant met with a friendly word often turns out lonelier than it is fierce.

The Lost Little Aurora

Read aloud, slowly and warmly. Stop often to let the children answer. There are no wrong answers here, only brave new ideas to try.

Before you begin

It is winter in the fjords, and the long night should be full of colour. On clear nights the Aurora Spirits dance, and the sky glows teal and green and purple. But tonight the sky stays dark. Something is wrong.

The littlest Aurora Spirit has tumbled down from the sky. She fell into the snowy Whispering Pines, and she lost her colours. Now she is too shy and too cold to glow.

Edda the Saga-Keeper calls you to the warm Hearth Hall. "You two have clever heads and kind hearts," she says. "Will you find the little aurora and help her shine again?"

She gives you three gifts: a little lantern, a ball of red yarn, and a warm honey bun. Then she smiles. "Up here we do not win by being the strongest. We win by being clever, brave, and kind."

What is your hero name? Are you a hero of Wit, of Courage, or of Heart?

Stop 1: The Dark Forest

You step out into the Whispering Pines. The snow is deep and soft. The tall trees stand dark and quiet all around you.

Somewhere in here, the little aurora is hiding. She is shy and cold and very, very small. You will have to look closely to find her.

How will you find her? Could you move softly and look for a tiny glimmer of light? Could you follow little footprints in the snow? Could you ask Nori the Tomte, the hearth sprite in the red cap, to help?

When you look gently, you spot a soft glimmer behind a tree. There she is, the littlest aurora, no bigger than your two hands, dim and shivering. "Hello," you whisper. "We came to help you."

Stop 2: The Three Colours

The little aurora is happy you found her. But she cannot glow. "I lost my three colours when I fell," she says sadly. "Teal, and green, and purple. They are hiding in the world now."

Look around. The colours did not go far. They are all near you.

Can you find her three colours? Where is teal? Where is green? Where is purple? Look at the icicles, look at the pines, look up at the sky.

You find teal in a shining icicle. You find green in a dark pine branch. You find purple high up in the twilight sky. One by one, the little aurora gathers her colours back. She begins to glow, soft and warm.

Stop 3: The Climb to the Sky

The little aurora glows now, but she is still afraid. "The sky is so high," she says. "What if I cannot reach it? What if I fall again?"

She needs your courage to lend her some of her own.

How will you help her be brave? Could you climb a tall pine with her? Could you cheer her on? You have a ball of red yarn. Could you give her a gentle boost up?

You climb the tallest pine. You tie the red yarn so she can hold on. You count together, one, two, three. "You can do it!" you call. The little aurora takes a deep breath, lets go, and leaps up into the dark.

The Sky Dances Again

Up she flies, higher and higher, glowing bright. The other Aurora Spirits swoop down to meet her, laughing. "You came back! You came back!" they sing.

Then the whole sky bursts into colour. Teal, and green, and purple, all dancing together over the snowy fjord. The long night is dark no more.

High among the stars, Freya the Kind looks down and smiles at you. You did it together. You were clever, you were brave, and most of all, you were kind. Well done, heroes of the fjords.

The Story in Pictures

Two small heroes finding a tiny dim aurora spirit hiding among snowy pines at dusk, her light barely a glimmer.

A small aurora spirit gathering back her colours from an icicle, a pine and the twilight sky, two heroes pointing them out.

A small red-capped hearth sprite and two heroes cheering a glowing little aurora spirit as she gathers courage atop a tall snowy pine.

A glorious aurora dancing across a starry sky over a snowy fjord, a kind goddess smiling from the stars as two heroes watch in wonder.
